Duxbury Police arrested a suspect last week following several thefts from a local appliance dealer.

Over the last few weeks the department, had been contacted several times by South Shore Cabinet on Tremont Street regarding thefts of property from behind their store, according to a press release from Chief Matthew Clancy. On Tuesday night at approximately 7:30 p.m., Detective Dennis McKenney was conducting surveillance near the store when he saw a black pickup truck drive behind the building. The driver of the truck then attempted to load a washing machine into the back of the truck. Detective McKenney and several patrol officers confronted the man and he was placed under arrest. During the arrest a small quantity of drugs were discovered.

David Tewksbury, age 40, of Kingston, was arraigned this morning in Plymouth District Court on charges of larceny over $250, trespassing, and possession of class A and B substances.

Duxbury police caught the thief red-handed with this washer.
